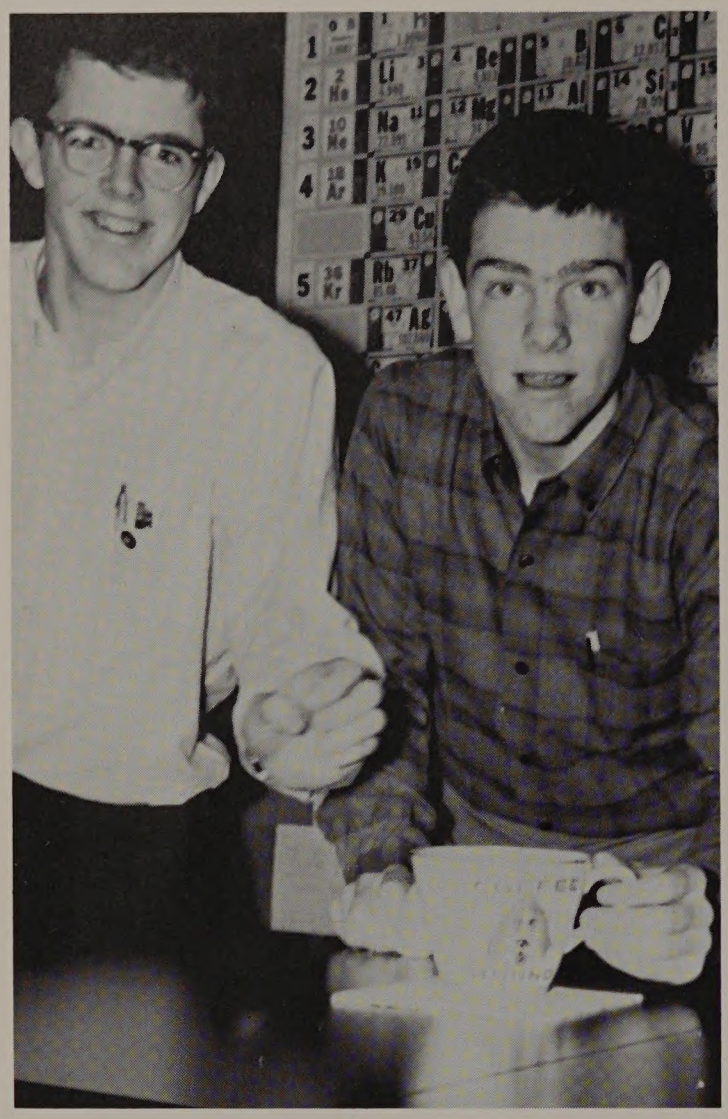
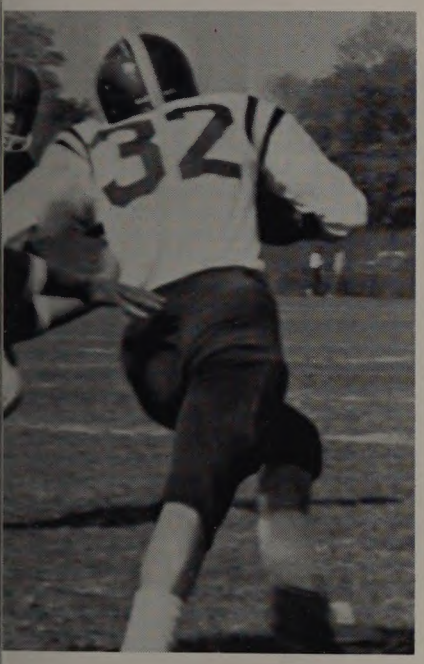
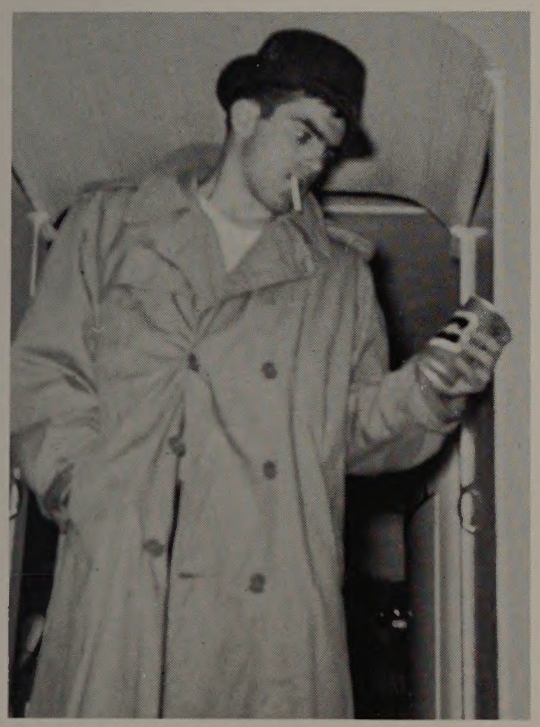
Many Things . . .

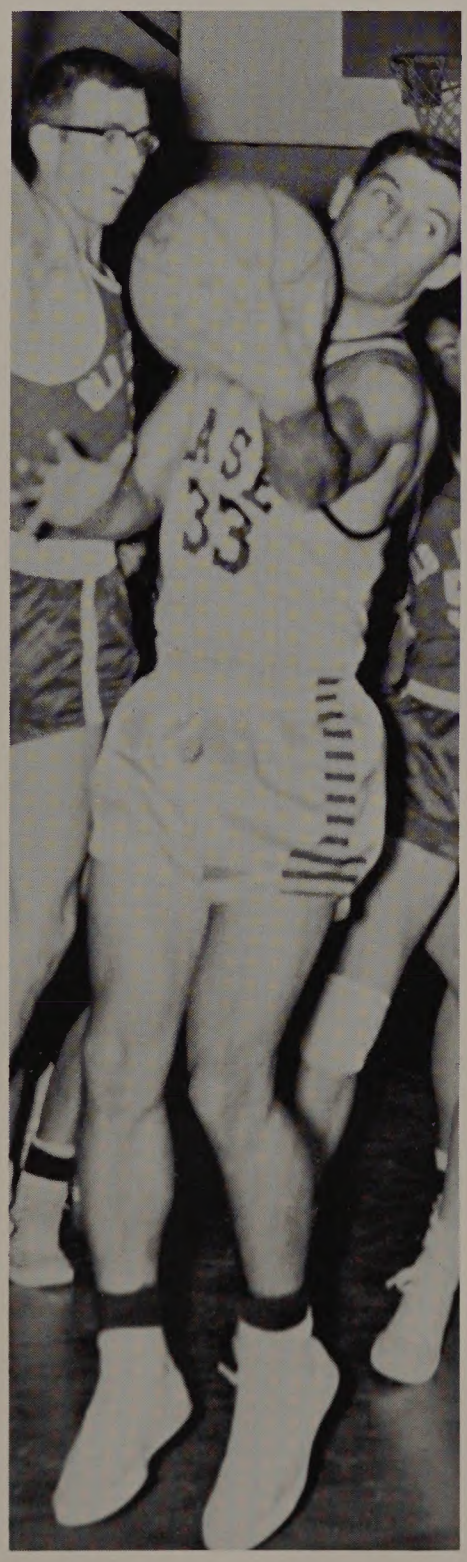


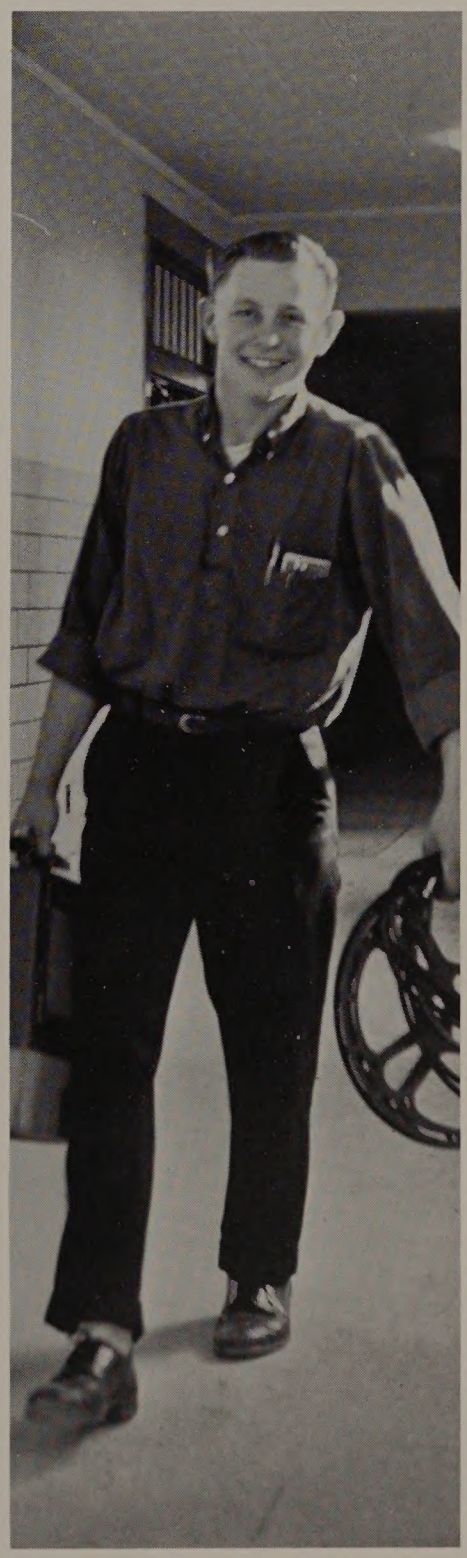
"Then let us laugh as do the brooks that such immortal youth is ours."

ANNA BRANCH









Dedication

Mr. Clifton Hoy

Mr. Clifton Hoy, custodian and friend to past graduates as well as to present students of Case, loves Case High, loves the bustle, the heartiness, the eternal youth of the whole place. Perhaps most of all, he loves the students, the young people, the kids, for their "Hi!" or "Hello!" or "How are you, Mr. Hoy?" even if it's yelled hurriedly and heard muffled at high tide in the corridor.

He loves the kids because they care; and that caring is important to a man who has spent thirty-one years feeling proud of the young generation being educated—thirty-one years while he was taking care of the school building, quietly, loyally. And the kids do love him. They know that under those gray workclothes is a heart that is good and generous, a heart that endures and serves for the joy of living and working and knowing people. For Case High and the students who learn here are his pride, too. Many days the students have dedicated to Mr. Hoy their happiest wish "Good Morning!" Now they dedicate to him this 1964 Chief.

Foreword

There will always be the memories of yesteryear—our first tottering steps into an uncertain world, the hop-scotch days and rough brutality of an uncivilized childhood, the mimicry, the mirth, the raging emotion of adolescence.

Four years in high school is little time to do all that we might wish. But of the scenes that passed, some are preserved forever in the pages which follow—the thrill of a game, the puzzle of a test, the high jinks of a leisure moment. These are the echoes of youth.

We were very tired,
We were very merry . . .

Administration

Mr. Donald F. McCaffrey

In his first assembly address, Mr. Donald F. McCaffrey told us about a young boy, who disappointed in a job for which he had hopefully left high school, had returned for a diploma in 1932, had graduated from Fitchburg State College in 1937, and had since been teacher, principal, and superintendent in many New England towns. This self-introduction of Mr. McCaffrey to us instilled us with a confidence in the responsibility he would take as superintendent in Swansea.

The superintendent of schools is not just the man who sits behind the desk in the Administration Office. He is the man who keeps working on projects like the language lab at Case and the French program at the Brown School until the plans have become a reality. He is the one who, resident and superintendent in many towns before ours, has now become a Swanseatowner pleased with the warmth of new friends and neighbors.

Miss Helen A. Reagan

Principal

Since 1946 Miss Helen A. Reagan has graced the office of principal with a wisdom and a dignity which endear her to us as a great and good lady.

Leader of the first Girl Scout troop in the town, principal at Gardner School, English teacher for many years, director of the dramatic club for a decade, and now principal of Case High, Miss Reagan has dedicated most of her life, spent "always in Swansea," to young children, to students.

Her advice has spurred us, her congratulations have cheered us, her smile has warmed our very hearts. And in her heart we hold a special niche of fondness, for we are, unlike her collections of china and Dickens' works, a part of her life—the collection of young people who will become, by her example, as she joys to see us, "responsible adults, citizens, and leaders."

Mr. Edward Silva

Vice Principal

Mr. Silva is that excited voice over the loudspeaker that begins, "Let me have your attention, Please. There is an away game tomorrow. Now, the easiest way to get to . . . " He is the fan at all the basketball, football, and baseball games, the guy who plays softball with boys on the field trip, the host each year to a bunch of student Christmas carolers, the vice-principal whom the freshmen call mister and the upperclassmen call uncle.

You cannot know him until you have been through four years of school, endured his dark looks, and swelled with his praise. No, you must have been a freshman walking quietly, obediently past that stern gray figure in the corridor, a sophomore elated to wring a tickle of a smile from him, a junior accustomed to joking with him, and finally a senior strolling (arm-in-arm) down the hall with that once-strict disciplinarian.

The fondness he holds for us, the new generation of his own alma mater, is as genuine as his hope that we "keep Swansea a vigorous, pleasant town in which to live and to learn the values of life."

English

Enter the English department. Enter four years of discovering thoughts that have worked wonders in the world, gems of wisdom and treasures of truth, immortalized by English masters from Stevenson to Shakespeare to Joyce. Enter the land where in paradox and metaphor Love, Life, and Death are mounted beautiful.

Beauty and truth of literature are seeded here, in the minds of the aging children. But it is only later, when Life reaches out from between the book covers to clobber them, that the children will harvest the festering, blossoming seeds and grow up. Until then the words are only words, like words, like words.

Homemaking

Not for school but for life they learn. Planning menus and preparing meals, mending and sewing, taking care of their own lives by good health habits and the lives of others by their knowledge of home nursing, and developing a personality pleasing to everyone near them—the girls learning these skills in the homemaking classes are the women around whom the happiness of their families will center for many generations.

Business

The earliest graduates of Case have gone directly from their school classes in business training into the business world. Today the proficiency in office practice which Case students have acquired opens for them gateways to newer and brighter careers as secretaries and stenographers in offices, banks, insurance companies, hospitals, businesses, and law establishments.

Whatever positions they may hold, they become important spokes in the wheel of the American social sphere. That someday when they win the confidence of their employers and co-workers is for them an occasion to feel a pride in themselves—in a skill well-learned, in a living well-earned.

Social Studies

This land, this world, all ours to know, all ours to traverse. "I hear America singing," says Walt Whitman; and far off, in every niche of every country, men sigh proudly, "This is my own, my native land."

Through our studies at Case we come to respect and understand the peoples of the world, their history, their economy, their culture. From the old problems over which men fought bitter wars, to the new ones over which men in the United Nations puzzle, we realize that the world at our doorstep is a challenge which must be met with the knowledge that all nations, all men, constitute the international community which is our world.

Music

"The sound of music" fills the Case gym twice a year, in two great bursts of song, the winter and spring concerts. But all year long the music students must practice the tedious scales and exercises before they can delight us with those superb overtures in melody and chorus. All year long, young people who just like music gather in the music room to sing.

Physical Education

Physical Education class offers an astoundingly varied program for breaking one's neck. The awesome vaulting horse is feared only slightly less than the spritely trampoline, which is the deadliest of all gym apparatus due to its astounding mobility. As to sports and games, everyone knows that if touch football doesn't get you, volleyball will.

Mathematics

Math is the realm of abstracts very real to minds which see beyond daily book exercises to a vast field of exploration. Of all the sciences, math is the language of all the physical unexplainables, math is the explanation; of all the universe that extends from infinite smallness to infinite greatness, math is the map.

Arithmetic, geometry, lots of little algebras, trigonometry and matrix—many long names make many facets to the magical world of pi, pie, and Pythagoras.

While encouraging the students who love math to continue studying it, Case's math department has imbued all the students with a respect for the promise of mathematics and the capabilities of mathematicians in the world.

Auto Shop

The floor's been mopped; the place is clean. But there's one thing the auto shop will always have. That's the smell of engines—engines that today make our world run—dirty, greasy engines with worn valves and faulty carburetors, bum transmissions and slipping clutches, blown rods and cracked pistons. But they're here for a purpose. They are to be fixed. They are to be pulled apart and put together and made useful again. They're going to run.

Someone will be taught, someone must be taught, to do it. That is what automotive shop is all about —learning to mend by mending. "You're on your own, up here boys. No special privileges—you're on your own." Mr. Wright knows what he says. That's just what's in store for them.

Sciences

The science department is a twilight zone between the beclouded logics and non-logics of math and English. Here someone is beginning. Someone is learning something which will someday bear some knowledge to be added to the bulk of knowledge in now. It is no mistake that the objective of every science student is immortality. Even eternity is not enough time to unravel all the puzzles. But still students make beginnings and try with eager egos to stuff the laughing universe into tiny spheres of knowledge.

Foreign Languages

Perhaps realizing that the meeting of the minds is accomplished first by the meeting of tongues, our students have taken the fullest advantage of the language program at Case.

Studying the Latin classics reincarnates for us the splendor of Rome and the great men of all the Roman world of 2000 years ago.

Students of French have taken a leap over the language barrier which often exists between Americans and not only the masters of literature but also the common people of a foreign land. It is our goal to understand many men who speak in many tongues—different from our own but no longer foreign to us.

Art Room

The Art Room is a threshold into another world—a world of sunlight and leaves, men and seashores —a world of beauty that has been transformed from a visual conception into a painting, a charcoal sketch, a mosaic.

In the Art Room, we students, like the great masters, try to capture on canvas the ethereal beauty of shimmering pools, the cragginess of mountains. Succeed or fail, we have recognized the beauty in the illusion of delicacy or enormity in nature.

Freshmen

We came as idiot children into a world which is too big for perhaps a month. The fearfulness of this world is dropped grins and punctuated prissiness, stark grins, flutters. Voices were shriller, feelings sharper—uncontrolled. Knots of ready boys and lots of girls roped together with glances; nobody cared and the whacking good times made anybody fair game.

Bios Club

"Would you like to buy a box of candy?" That's the question most asked by Bios Club members. For several years the explanation has been "We're planning to fix up the dam." Since the beginning of the club in 1957, many boxes of candy have been sold and, with the help of the Montaup Electric Company, many improvements on the Swansea Dam have been made.

Each fall the members plant a dozen or so more flower bulbs on what are now solid banks; each spring is time once again to haul out the rakes and clear away all the dead leaves and branches which winter has left cluttering the dam area.

Even if only a daffodil or two from all the bulbs planted appears in the spring, the beauty of those few flowers is a kind of reward to the Bios Clubbers for their work.

Student Council

The four classes at Case have for a long time been able to work together through the Student Council to achieve a harmony in the school. Besides continuing the annual responsibilities, taking a collection for the Dana G. Plante Scholarship program inaugurated in 1957, and attending conventions of student councils from many other schools in New England, the Council this year initiated a change in the practice of holding school assemblies.

Thanks to their efforts, now all four clases in their turn have the opportunity to attend assemblies which feature speakers invited or movies hired for the occasion. This change, if only a beginning, was a step toward strengthening the Student Council in the school.

Junior Classical League

"Mirable visu," "wonderful to behold," are the toga-clad students of the J.C.L. during Latin Week. These same merry Roman citizens are the faithful interpreters of Cicero's famous orations all the other weeks of the school year. Casting away their translations for a day they take a trip to Boston to tour the Classical galleries of the Museum of Fine Arts.

"Numen Sine Nomine," their newspaper, gives the students the opportunity to write an article or poem, writing in the ancient language they have studied for three or four years.

World Affairs Club

Many of the delegates sent to represent Case High at various youth conferences and conventions are chosen from the ranks of the World Affairs Club. Indeed, monthly meetings are filled with, besides the commentaries on national and international situations in the news, tales of club members who have returned from world affairs in miniature—perhaps a Model Congress, a Model United Nations, or an adventure on Youth Conference Day or Student Government Day. Listening to the reports, all the members may then feel as if they had been delegates to every convention, sharing world affairs with many other students not only from other states but also from other countries.

The "Chief"

The yearbook staff is one of the most decorous groups in the school—until the day of each deadline. Four times during their senior year, there is pure bedlam for those brave souls who just the spring before had so coveted the prospect of being on the yearbook staff.

It is one thing to look at the shiny photographs when they have come back from the studio, but quite another thing to take the pictures. The fun of the student photographers is a kind of silent dedication to waiting patiently at the football and basketball games, the bonfires, the pep rallies, the dances, for just the right instant when, with a click of the camera shutter, they will have captured forever a priceless moment—one in a million—in the lives of their classmates.

And what of the people who organize these photographs into a theme of school life, of four hard, happy years, yes, a yearbook to be proud of. And the students who write sketches, find out who's who in each picture, and type out the copy sheets —surely they must like the work they are doing to do such a painstaking job.

All these people are the ones who stay long after hours on a deadline afternoon to finish up details and send another shipment of pages off to the publisher—all these people make up a good yearbook staff.

Cardinal Staff

"Let's get organized!" rings the familiar cry of our editor-in-chief preparing his troops to begin again the battle with their idealess minds. Thrice each week the staff is exhorted, prodded, cajoled, threatened to THINK of its own assignments—usually to no avail. Journalism is not a class, not a world of imaginative or intensive literary accomplishment, but a group of aspiring young writers brought together by a mutual desire to "be on the 'Cardinal' staff."

In our innocence we saw the "Cardinal" surrounded by an aura of mystery and prestige, but quickly realized that a paper is printed by hard work and perseverance. That is, this became apparent to the small minority which had not become self appointed roving reporters, disappearing for entire periods of journalism. Even in the chaotic atmosphere which prevails and the apathy of both staff and school, the paper "comes out," a paper dedicated to preserving freedom of press, to using any article of reasonable intelligence.

As our Adviser enjoys to emphasize, it is an accomplishment to enter knowing nothing, manage to publish a paper, and leave knowing little more.

French Club

Le Cercle Francais continues to be a stronghold for the study of the French language. From singing "Dominique" and acting out a play, "Le Match de Football," to the business of the meeting, the seances of the Cercle are conducted entirely en francais. These same students form the newspaper staff of "La Classicale," which is one of the few French high school newspapers in the area.

Latin Club

The members of the Latin Club, those ever-translating second-year students, are faced with the big question, to continue or not to continue—to study Cicero and Vergil, to hold a cake sale to support their trips to the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston, to become members of the staff of the "Numen Sine Nomine," and to become members of the nationwide Junior Classical League in hopes that the club will raise enough money to send them to the National Convention—or to give up Latin, to end now and forever, their studies with only Caesar's Gallic Wars to remember.

Boys' Leaders

The Boys' Leaders Club cannot be called an organization for they conduct no meetings and they do not perform as a group. The club is actually a body of young men that enjoy leading their classmates in sporting activities. Mr. O'Hare, Physical Education director, chooses these boys on the basis of physical ability and leadership qualities. They are a tremendous assistance to Coach O'Hare in making the physical education course beneficial as well as enjoyable to all the boys of the school.

Responsibility and leadership characterize the members of the Girls' Leaders Club. These girls—sophomores, juniors, and seniors—are sports participants, majorettes, or cheerleaders. It is the job of these girls to lead physical education classes, to organize sports activities, and to set good examples both in and out of school for other Case girls to follow.

Down the corridor to one of the classrooms he goes, with a projector in one hand and a reel of film in the other. He's not an expert in electronics; but he knows how to tinker with the knobs and screws to make the projector work and how to fix it when it stops. He isn't paid for what he does; he doesn't even get to see the movie. But he expects neither. He is just a student happy to offer some of his time during the school day to be an Audio-Visual Aide.

Librarians

The Librarians perform a very valuable service to the school. They are responsible for signing out the books which students come to choose during free periods each day. They accept gladly the tasks of putting the returned books back upon their shelves and of cataloguing all new books added to the library collection. Both the daily dealings in the library, borrowing a book or doing research for a term paper, and ordering a book at the Book Fair, which comes only once a year, are made easier and pleasanter by the willingness of these Librarians to help the students and the teachers who use the library.

Business Bees

Who sells the ribboned yellow splashes of chrysanthemums worn on collars and hats by the Cardinal ladies at the Thanksgiving Day game? Why, the Business Bees! Their purpose in both that sale and the annual cake sale at open house is to provide an award at graduation for the student who has excelled in the business curriculum during his years at Case. Especially ambitious this year, the Bees accepted an invitation to tour the John Hancock Building in Boston and enjoyed watching many of the new machines being employed in business offices today.

Drama Club

I, a stranger, crossed over the threshold into a world I little understood but shall never forget, the world of drama. The people here make believe. They quote prices on eggs that aren't really there and sit on the stage floor quite convinced that it is a set of stairs leading to a porch which I can't see. They say words but they are adult words and actions from young forms. What do they do? They take some props, greasepaint, and a script and make a seventeen year old boy think, act, and feel like a man of seventy about ready to die. It is a marvelous world where one can forget himself and pretend—pretend to be anything real or imaginary.

Case has such a world in its Drama Club and Workshop where the interested can find anything from the history of make-up to how to hammer nails in a triangular pattern to keep a flat from falling apart.

This year the Drama Club has worked on the one act play "The Death of the Hired Man" to present at the Southwestern Massachusetts Drama Festival to be held at Dighton-Rehoboth Regional High School.

Bringing enjoyment to others through reading is the chief purpose of the Story-telling Club. Organized and advised by Miss Sullivan these girls give up free afternoons and Saturday mornings to read to children in the lower grades of Swansea, schools and in neighboring orphans' homes.

Office Assistants

An office assistant's main job is to run errands for Miss Regan, Mr. Silva or any of the teachers who ask her to do so. For example, she may be asked to mimeograph tests or to show a new student to his first class. She delivers telephone messages, menus, a teacher's mail, and report cards or other notices to the homerooms. She does all the background work without which the school would not function so efficiently.

Cardinal Band

They are the music-makers. Music of all school occasions is their business. To people just passing by the door of the music room, their practice is "some kind of march." But to the band members who make the music, now it is a lively time to spur a fighting spirit for tomorrow's game; now it is a somber piece for All-District Competition. From the first football game in the fall to the parade on Memorial Day they are the proudest bunch of band players who ever wore maroon and gold.

OFFICERS

Bottom to Top: M. Congdon, D. Young, D. Moniz.

You're six or seven years old and you're on your way into an exciting world of learning. Someone sits you down and hands you a book. No one asks "Would you like to learn to sing?" They just mumble on about something called do, re, mi and "There, there's nothing to it. Isn't that easy!" Then, quite proud of yourself, you start to sing. Suddenly, someone shouts "Stop!" Frightened half to death you sit back prepared for the worst and you get it. There aren't only do, re, mi's to remember, but other interesting things like half notes, quarter notes, eighths and sixteenths; then rests—quarter rests, half rests, and others, plus all those complicated timing devices. You can't just sing in the same voice all the time. There are dynamics to watch for.

It's really all quite alarming and you don't know what to make of it all. Then one day you sit back and listen. "Why, it's pretty!" You add your voice and from then on you go through life with a song in your heart.

When you enter high school, a little timid, you find first a familiar tune right there waiting in the music room. You're on your way safely embarked through your high school years singing in the annual winter and spring concerts.

You'll never forget those first frightening days; but then, you'll never forget a song.

Football

Spring was the beginning of those long and grueling hours of drill that go into making a strong team that is worth standing in bitter cold or drizzling rain for—worth all the cheers and hopes of the sidelines.

Not rated too high in pre-season polls, the "characters" made up in sheer spirit what they lacked in size. They took each game separately, looking forward to each as a potential win.

The battle cry being given, tri-captains Bruce Christopher, Al Provost, and Joe Santos led their chargers against the enemy camp, succumbing to the foe but twice. Withstanding many blows, Larry Summers, Pete Goss, Arnie Ferguson, Al Provost, and Joe "Moose" Kirkman composed a staunch front line which opened holes in the enemy line for fullback Bruce Christopher and halfback Jim Bradshaw, and protected the valuable throwing arm of Joe Santos.

Pass patterns ground into their heads, ends Gene Willette and all-state Mike Travers, and slotbacks Will Letourneau and Gary Holmes worked the ball down the field, out of reach of the enemy, and over the goal line.

There were the darker sides to every game, when the defense became slightly porous; but "Letourneau's Mob" held the fortress that ranged from every side. Bolstering the boys in those bleak moments were Stan Johnson, Bob James, Tom Gaynor, and Russ Carpentier, the all-important extra-energy stimulant needed behind each team.

A way of life ended with the final game—sunny and hazy and stormy skies, trumpeters and drummers heralding each game, spirited girls and sideliners crying for victory, muddy fields, dirty faces, bruises, mounds of bodies heaped sky-high, a fleet-footed youth carrying a ball towards a far-off goal—those were the scenes of football, gone, for now, yet to return next year.

For the players on the field, the game must be the only concern. There is no time for a player to think of anything but how to beat the guy across from him. The basic lesson of football is survival, and it is a lesson which must be learned well. Once a player gets sick of taking, then he can give; for coaches know that players are made, not born. This is the second basic lesson of football: to win you must hit the other guy just a little harder than he hits you.

But football is not all grim and dust-bound. There is color, and pageantry, and the frantic-for-a-moment fears of the cheerleaders at third and seven. There is the comic gung-ho earnest of the reserve, the third-stringer whose greatest hope and greatest fear is that he'll be called upon to enter the game. And finally there are the smiles when the game is won and congratulations for a great catch or a fumble-causing tackle.

Baseball

Spring rolls around a corner and out of every door pour kids, caps, muzzles, bats, balls—all sorts of odd-looking gear. Baseball season has begun!

A determined Cardinal nine take to the grass-covered diamond in early April and spend three weeks of rigorous training in calisthenics, hitting, bunting, running, and drilling, before tackling other teams in the league.

The '63 season climaxed with a Narry championship and a trip to the Eastern Massachusetts Tech Tournament. With three quick victories, Case advanced to the finals, where powerful Matigon took the Cardinals and the Class C title.

Second best in Eastern Massachusetts is a worthy title for a team winning 17 out of 22 games.

Cross Country

Five miles a day—miles that seemed to stretch on into eternity, miles that made your body cry out with exhaustion, made your already tender feet more calloused, miles that left you with sweat-streaked faces, aching thighs, raw throats, lungs seared by every gasping breath — That was practice.

A meet meant competition and that last lunge for the tape down a track that seemed to leer at you; but you ran faster, you strained, you defied that dusty path—What matter if you lost a match?—Yours was the victory of trying, of persevering, of never giving up!

A 0-10 record may sound discouraging, and so it was, but the boys never quit . . . they loved their sport; they knew they were building the base upon which future harrier teams would grow.

Basketball

Case High's basketball team of 1963-64 was faced with one of the most difficult challenges that any team can face—following up the greatest team in the history of the school.

Case fans were far from optimistic when the Cardinals took the floor in early December against Providence Central. With only one tested ballplayer, John Davis, and the remaining four boys with no varsity experience, the team seemed weak indeed.

But as the season progressed the team began to gell; and through the experience gained by a heartbreak defeat at the hands of Dighton-Rehoboth, the Case five began to look like a championship contender. The specialties of each individual player became evident in the first weeks of trial for the squad.

John Davis led the team in scoring 19 out of the 20 scheduled games, eclipsing the 30-mark five times, including a 45-point output that broke a six-year Case High scoring record. John led all league scorers with 414 league points and 496 points in all 20 games. His average was second by two tenths of a point at 25.9. His efforts, however, would have been fruitless without the rebounding strength offered by Joe Santos. Joe could rebound with the best in the league. Joe and junior Stan Johnson were major reasons for the Cardinals' impressive 13-7 record. Defensively speaking, Bruce Wilde was one of the finest players in the league. His quickness held many of the league's high scorers far below their average. Junior Jack Eddy was the squad ball handler. His coolness at the foul line as well as in the backcourt spelled success for the Cards many times during the season. His sharp outside shooting was always a threat to Case opponents.

Coach O'Hare had good bench strength in seniors Ev Rodriques, Joe O'Neil, Jim Barnes, and Steve Purdy, juniors Bob English and Jan Szelag, and sophomore Mike Travis. Coach O'Hare was always confident that the remaining members of the squad could be called upon when needed to do a good job.

Highlight of the season included a 30-69 come-from-behind victory over Prevost and a 67-65 overtime victory over Dighton-Rehoboth.

Basketball, like all sports, builds character, determination, and leadership. Their qualities were surely developed in a fighting basketball squad of 1963-64.

Basketball

2:00 P.M.—Gotta hurry down to the locker room. Only 10 minutes to change into those wrinkled "maroonies," "lost and found" socks, and holey, laceless sneakers. 2:11—"What took you so long? The rest of the girls have been here for 10 minutes . . . You could have done that at the beginning of school." "Better practice hard today—big game tomorrow. Hope we place at least third in the league. Of course we will if we cut the comedy and start practice—oops, wrong player . . ." "Watch those passes! . . . " My freshmen can play better than you." Can't do anything right today—stop giggling—concentrate . . . "Rebounds—get off your feet!" . . . Oh, my ulcers! 2:50 "Guards—50 foul shots, Forwards —50 . . . Have you finished taking 100? Take 50 more." 3:20 "O.K., girls, I'm going to let you out in time for the late bus today . . . Remember, clean socks and sneakers and watch your passes tomorrow. They've got a tall team. Thanks."

ELAINE DOODSON, Capt.

Volleyball

There is a hint of spring in the air as March steps in, announcing the beginning of the volleyball season. The first day of tryouts finds quite a number of girls who wish to try their skill at this sport.

Soon the team is picked and immediately practices are organized. Every afternoon until the first game the girls practice, trying to perfect a serve, working on the spike, and learning to set up the ball so as to make the spike possible.

Volleyball is a sport where quickness and alertness are vital. The team becomes accustomed to hearing the command "move" or "wake up" from the coach.

Finally, the first game arrives. A feeling of excitement pervades the gym as teams from 6 or 7 schools at a time come together to challenge each other. Quickly the eye scans the different teams, for a moment watching them practice. Suddenly the game begins and you hope as you stand there awaiting the first serve, that you don't muff it. Once the real action begins, you can feel the tension mount as the ball goes back and forth over the net. You tell yourself to be quick, and move. As soon as you've accomplished a good feat such as saving the ball or gaining some points you really feel part of the game and love it. Then, as suddenly as it started, it is over, and either you've won or lost.

Victory brings a tremendously happy moment, and defeat a moment of depression, but they are all just moments making up the life you live, all adding to that vast store of high school memories.

Field Hockey

Fall, and the girls' field hockey team begins its second season. Dribble, run, drive, into the goal; dribble, run, drive . . . You're tired, hot, winded, you do it again. Must stay in position and make short passes, keeping the ball close. These same commands mull over and over in your mind; and you do your utmost to comply.

And then, the games—which make it all worthwhile. You forget the hours you've worked; you want only to get in there, to fight, to win. In a sense, you experience oblivion: you act only by instinct—dodging, running, passing, barely conscious of anything except that overwhelming desire to do your best, to win.

But soon it is all over. The field hockey season ends. We lost more games than we won, but we learned to accept defeat; we knew that when one team wins, the other team must lose, and that we could not be victor always. This knowledge brought us a far greater personal victory.

We're off!

We moved about within the realms of one little world, separate from all others we will ever know.

There were the real and the unreal in our world—songs and studies, auctions and castles.

Camelot was a child's dream come true.

Class Day was the beginning of an end—an end that meant not belonging.

Behind us we have but memories. We dream of a future, we face an unfamiliar world, we sing a new song of life, and we let the sun shine upon smiling and hopeful hearts.

ALMA MATER

Our strong bond can ne'er be broken
Form'd in dear Case High.
Far surpassing wealth unspoken
Seal'd by friendship's tie.

Chorus: Alma Mater - Alma Mater,
Deep graven on each heart,
Ode Victorious, we go singing
As from these halls we depart.

Mem'ry's leaflets close shall twine
Around our hearts for aye,
And waft us back o'er life's broad track
To pleasures of past day.

High School life at best is passing
Gliding swiftly by;
Then let us pledge in word and deed
Our love for dear Case High.
